A symposium sheds light on the atrocities experienced by the Turkish population in eastern Anatolia at the hands of Armenian armed groups, saying both societies suffered during the period between the Ottoman-Russian war and the National Struggle

Turkish and foreign experts emphasized at a symposium organized by the Turkish Historical Society (TTK) Thursday that both the local Turkish population and Armenians in eastern Anatolia suffered in the period leading up to the 1915 events.

We are working for the truth to be uncovered, TTK President Birol Çetin said at the symposium titled From the Ottoman-Russian War (1877-1878) to the National Struggle: Eastern Anatolia Occupation, Atrocities and Liberation hosted by Kafkas University in eastern Kars province.
