Secretary of the Security Council of Armenia Armen Grigoryan has met with United States National Security Advisor Jake Sullivan in the White House.

We discussed the regional and broader extra-regional security situation and challenges. In this context, I presented to my interlocutor the approaches of the Armenian side around a number of important directions. We spoke about issues of bilateral interest, in particular we emphasized the development of bilateral cooperation within the framework of energy, economy and democracy, Grigoryan said in a statement on social media.
