With Sundays snap general election in Spain marking the last European election before the summer recess, EURACTIV and EuropeElects will take a deep dive into how elections could shape countries across Europe for the rest of the year.

Spanish voters are heading to the polls in a snap parliamentary election on Sunday.

Despite a nationwide polling ban that is now in effect, earlier polls point to a possible victory of the right-wing Partido Popular (PP), which will have to ally with the far-right VOX party □ though votes may not be enough to beat a possible left-wing coalition between sitting Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez's socialist party and the new left-wing platform Sumar.
