The Guardian (29 November 2023)

Tobias Billström, Swedens foreign minister, told reporters this morning that it is high time to get the ratification done by both Türkiye and also by Hungary of course, and this was a clear message sent by the foreign ministers.

For months, Turkey and Hungary have delayed ratification of Swedens Nato membership, fuelling frustration within the military alliance.

Speaking as Nato ministers meet in Brussels, Billström said: We have a very dangerous moment in time for Europe and for the world □ and for Nato as an organisation. With the security deteriorating and also with the war in Ukraine, Swedens membership in Nato is very important for the organisation.
