Mohsen Al-Mandalawi, the acting speaker of the Parliament, recalled Wednesday, the fourth anniversary of the attacks by forces of global arrogance on martyr Abu Mahdi Al-Muhandis and the guest of Iraq, General Qassem Soleimani, and their companions near Baghdad International Airport.

In a statement released by his media office and obtained by the Iraqi News Agency, Al-Mandalawi declared, "The airport crime will remain a painful turning point that history will remember throughout the ages by memorializing the martyrs and cursing the treacherous hand that assassinated them."

He continued, saying that "remembering this day is only a small part of paying homage to the martyrs and those with them, because through their sacrifices, the peoples of the world live in safety today following the defeat of the terrorist Daesh, and it was through their hands that Iraq attained stability and freedom, and the Free learned how to make their victory self-made."
