According to Nikol Pashinyan, Armenia needs a constitution that would make it "more competitive and viable in the new geopolitical and regional situation".

Armenia needs a new constitution, Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said.

"I maintained in a couple of working conversations with the justice minister that in my view, as well as according to a number of my colleagues, the Republic of Armenia needs a new constitution. Not constitutional amendments but a new constitution. I am making this opinion public in order to initiate a broader discussion," Pashinyan said at a meeting with the Justice Ministry's personnel.
