After getting burned in Albania, Kosovos ruling party is now cautiously trying to expand its role and profile in neighbouring North Macedonia.

In 2021, Kosovos Prime Minister, Albin Kurti, used his dual citizenship to vote in the general elections in Albania, supporting candidates from his Vetevendosje partys sister movement there.

The head-on challenge to Albanias Socialist PM Edi Rama, on his own turf, for the role of pan-Albanian leader, did not work out; none of Kurtis candidates entered Albanias parliament.
