In an interview with The Telegraph, Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan talks about Armenia-Azerbaijan normalization, the relations with Russia, EU and NATO.

Below is the full text of the interview.

The Telegraph: Roland Oliphant [] Minister Pashinyan, thank you for finding time to speak to us. I want to ask you something obvious, which is about the peace process with Azerbaijan. It has been five months now that the Azerbaijani forces have taken full control over Nagorno Karabakh. After that, there were discussions about peace, President Aliyev spoke about peace and his readiness to officially end the 30-year conflict, but nothing happened after that. Where are we now and why is it being delayed?...
