Prime Minister Nikol Pashinian is trying to intimidate Armenians to justify more territorial concessions to Azerbaijan planned by him, the Russian Foreign Ministry said on Wednesday.

The ministry spokeswoman, Maria Zakharova, also claimed that Pashinian has opted for such unilateral solutions to contentious territorial issues under Western pressure.

Intimidating ones own population is hardly the best way to achieve a result that suits Armenia, she told a news briefing in Moscow. It is necessary to resolve these issues in a calm, constructive manner. There is a mechanism for this: it is the [Russian-mediated] commission on delimitation of the Armenian-Azerbaijani border.
