Two men were wounded and another arrested during an apparent armed attack on a police station in Yerevan launched by them on Sunday.

According to the Armenian police, they detonated a hand grenade while trying to break into the police headquarters of the city's northern Nor Nork district. Two of them were injured by the blast and hospitalized while the other remained outside the building, threatening to set off another grenade, the police spokesman, Narek Sargsian, told reporters.

Sargsian said that the man was neutralized by security forces without the use of firearms following a two-hour standoff. An anti-terror squad of Armenia's National Security Service (NSS) was seen arriving at the scene during the standoff.
