Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan lambasted [Karabakhs] exiled leaders taking refuge in Armenia, for continuing to present themselves as a government in exile and threatened to crack down on them on Thursday.

Opening a weekly session of his cabinet, Pashinyan stressed for three times that there can be no government in Armenia apart from the government of Armenia.

I cannot but note that certain circles of people displaced from [Karabakh] are voluntarily or involuntarily taking steps that pose a threat to Armenias national security. They proclaim some governments in exile and so on. I want to say clearly that there is one government in Armenia, and this government is sitting in this hall, Pashinyan said at a government session on Thursday.
