Bosnian Serb assembly ups its confrontation with High Representative and the US by adopting new laws giving the entity sole power over elections and referendums.

Responding to the latest interventions of the High Representative to Bosnia and Herzegovina, Christian Schmidt, the National Assembly of Bosnias Serb-dominated entity, Republika Srpska, adopted an Election Law on Friday. Announcing it earlier this month, Milorad Dodik, the RS president, called it one of the most important documents for the entity. A majority of 51 in the assembly voted for the law.
