As Ukraine gains territory inside Russia but is pushed back in its own Donetsk region, President Volodymyr Zelenskyy heaped pressure on his Western allies for more help.

Our guys are doing great on all fronts. However, there is a need for faster delivery of supplies from our partners, Zelenskyy said in an evening address on Sunday.

Decisions are needed, as are timely logistics for the announced aid packages. I especially address this to the United States, the United Kingdom and France, he added.
