Azerbaijan lacks the political will to sign a peace deal with Armenia and may be planning further military action against it, Foreign Minister Ararat Mirzoyan said on Wednesday one week after holding more talks with his Azerbaijani counterpart.

Mirzoyan complained about Bakus repeated rejections of an Armenian proposal to sign an interim peace treaty that would leave out the few differences remaining between the two sides.

For some reasons, for some calculations, they come up with new preconditions each time, and we can see that they just dont want to sign the document ✱ We dont see this political will from the Azerbaijani side, he told an international security conference in Poland.
