The President of Croatia, Zoran Milanovic, says he will not consent to deploying military personnel of the country's Armed Forces to participate in the NATO Security Assistance and Training for Ukraine (NSATU) mission.

The leader stated this in an address to the nation, Ukrinform reports with reference to HRT.

"As the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces I will not allow the participation of members of our armed forces in this kind of mission, which could potentially have harmful consequences on Croatia's national interests, regardless of the fact that government earlier, of its own volition, assumed this obligation in Croatia's name, knowing full well that it did not have my approval, and that by doing so they were in breach of the constitution," Milanovic said.
