Georgian Prime Minister Irakli Kobakhidze on Tuesday announced the commencement of construction of the Anaklia deep sea port in the countrys Black Sea town to ensure increased logistical capability between Asia and Europe, emphasising the projects greatest strategic importance.

He said the port, with an initial investment of $600 million, would have a capacity to handle 600,000 containers per year, adding the first phase of the construction would directly employ 500 individuals.
