As experts came together in Sofia Tuesday to discuss the report by Mario Draghi on the EU competitiveness, they agreed that a key message was a need for change. Titled "The Draghi Report: the new economic policy of the EU and the prospects for Bulgaria", the discussion was organized by the Green Transition Forum and the Bulgarian Federation of Industrial Energy Consumers with support from dir.bg.

Italian economist and former European Central Bank President Mario Draghi was tasked by the European Commission to prepare a report of his personal vision on the future of European competitiveness. The report was presented in September to the European Parliament. It examines the main challenges and opportunities facing Europe and its industrial sector, and proposes measures to strengthen EU competitiveness.
