Azerbaijan has been an active participant in climate negotiations since the beginning, Azerbaijani Foreign Minister Jeyhun Bayramov stated to journalists on the sidelines of COP29.

Although, unlike many countries, we had only 11 months instead of two years, we did everything possible to bring parties positions closer together and provide a collaborative platform to achieve significant outcomes at this conference, Bayramov remarked.

He expressed optimism over the results of COP29s first day, which began on November 11. Yesterday, after nearly 20 hours of negotiations, we reached an agreement on the agenda, which was subsequently approved. Another significant outcome of the first day was the agreement on Article 6.4 of the Paris Agreement, a topic that has been discussed for many years, he said.
