South Korea's ruling party announced on Wednesday that it will oppose the opposition's move to impeach President Yoon Suk Yeol over his controversial martial law declaration, local media reported.

The crucial decision was made at a meeting of the ruling People Power Party (PPP) lawmakers, who endorsed the party's position of opposing President Yoon's impeachment, Seoul-based Yonhap News reported.

Earlier, Yoon met with Prime Minister Han Duck-soo and other PPP leaders on Wednesday to discuss future strategy after opposition parties filed an impeachment motion in response to the brief martial law declaration late Tuesday evening.
