Deputy Foreign Minister Elnur Mammadov has stated that constitutional changes in Armenia are necessary to achieve peace.

After Azerbaijan liberated its territories from occupation in 2020, we made our first peace proposal to Armenia in 2021. A country that wins a war typically does not propose peace, but we did. We prepared the basic principles for a peace agreement. Between 2020 and 2022, we were unsure of Armenias intentions. Following that, we engaged in comprehensive discussions. These took place in the United States, Russia, and Kazakhstan. During these discussions, we tried to develop a peace agreement, Mammadov said.
