Prime Minister Nikol Pashinian indicated on Thursday that his government will press ahead with plans to seek Armenias membership in the European Union despite serious warnings from Russia.

Pashinian pointed to the governments endorsement on January 9 of a bill calling for the start of a process of Armenia's accession to the European Union when he spoke during the annual World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland.

There is a very high probability that our parliament will adopt that law, he said. It would mean legally that we start the process of getting more and more close to the European Union.
