Weeks of student-led protests, the largest in Serbia in decades, continue to mount a challenge to the Western Balkan country's President Aleksandar Vučić.

Serbia's students led a mass street protest and blocked bridges over the River Danube in the northern city of Novi Sad on Saturday to mark three months since a concrete awning crashed down at a train station there, killing 15 people.

Tens of thousands of people converged on Novi Sad for the blockades, dubbed Three Months Three Bridges. One of the blockades is set to extend until Sunday.
