The question is not who will be Germanys next chancellor, but rather which of his rivals hell govern with.

So while were fairly sure Friedrich Merzs conservatives will be in charge □ the outcome seems almost nailed on according to the polls □ thats just where the story begins, as the design of Germanys political system means a coalition of parties is almost inevitable.

And while the overall winner of the Feb. 23 election looks boringly predictable, the makeup of the coalition is still very much up in the air.
