The peace talks being held in Geneva aim for reunification, but expectations in the short term are low.

Turkish Cypriot and Greek Cypriot leaders met in Geneva, Switzerland on Monday to discuss the possibility of reopening negotiations to discuss the reunification of the Mediterranean island once again.

Representatives from Turkey, Greece, the United Kingdom, and the EU will also be present, however chances of a breakthrough are slim. Supporters of the summit valued the mere convening of the meeting, but acknowledged that expectations are very low.
