The next meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) will take place in Tajikistan's Dushanbe on October 9, 2025, Trend reports.

The decision was made during a restricted-format session of the CIS Foreign Ministers Council held in Kazakhstan's Almaty. During the meeting, participants discussed current regional and international issues, and adopted several procedural decisions, including a review of the activities of CIS sectoral cooperation bodies.

Tajikistan's Foreign Minister Sirojiddin Muhridin, who currently chairs the Council, emphasized that Tajikistan's presidency of the CIS will continue to be guided by principles of continuity and respect for the positions of all member states.
