The mayor of Kyiv, Vitali Klitschko, has told the BBC that Ukraine may have to give up land as part of a peace deal with Russia, amid a growing pressure from President Donald Trump to accept territorial concessions.

"One of the scenarios is * to give up territory. It's not fair. But for the peace, temporary peace, maybe it can be a solution, temporary," he said.

But the 53-year-old former boxing champion-turned politician stressed that the Ukrainian people would "never accept occupation" by Russia.
