Fighting for every vote to win Romanias presidential elections next Sunday, hard-right nationalist candidate George Simion seeks an alliance with Hungarys Prime Minister Viktor Orbán.

Following years of nationalist discourse that also went against Romanias ethnic Hungarians, the hard-right leader of the Alliance for the Union of Romanians (AUR) George Simion is fighting for every vote to ensure his victory in the presidential elections on Sunday.

As part of his strategy, he has recalibrated his nationalist political platform and is now appealing to the Hungarian community — known for its disciplined approach to voting — and their party.
