Chinese President Xi Jinping has suggested that China and Brazil set an example of unity and self-reliance in the Global South, Chinese state media has reported.

In a phone call on Monday, Xi told Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva that China was ready to work with Brazil to be a model for other countries and build a more just world and a more sustainable planet, the state-run Xinhua news agency said.

Xi told Lula that China-Brazil ties were at their best in history and the alignment of the two countries development strategies was making smooth progress, Xinhua reported.
