Top Azerbaijani and Kazakh officials discussed ways to develop bilateral economic cooperation and strengthen the fraternal and allied relations between the two nations during a meeting in Baku on Tuesday.

The meeting, attended by Azerbaijan's Minister of Energy Parviz Shahbazov and Kazakhstan's Minister of Transport Nurlan Sauranbayev, hailed the development of the strategic partnership and the implementation of the Comprehensive Program on the Development of Cooperation between the two countries for 2022-2026, News.Az reports, citing AZERTAC.

The sides discussed ongoing and future measures to further enhance cooperation in energy, transport, and other sectors. Addressing the meeting, Shahbazov said that Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan, as fraternal and allied nations, are united by common history, culture, and a shared strategic vision for the future. He emphasized that, thanks to the political will and wise leadership of Presidents Ilham Aliyev and Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, cooperation between the two countries has been developing dynamically and sustainably in all spheres.
