Malaysian Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim on Thursday confirmed that Chinese Premier Li Qiang and leaders and representatives from the US, Japan, Europe, the Middle East, Russia, Latin America, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa will attend the 47th summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

The ASEAN summit begins on Oct. 26 and continues until Oct. 28 in Kuala Lumpur, where US President Donald Trump is also expected to witness the peace accord signing between Cambodia and Thailand, according to state-run news agency Bernama.

World Bank, International Monetary Fund (IMF) chiefs and other representatives from other world organizations are also expected to attend the summit.
