Serbia remains committed to joining the EU □ but the unresolved status of Kosovo, waning public support, and regional rivalries continue to block its path. Ahead of Euronews EU Enlargement Summit on November 4, Euronews Srbija outlines the current status of Serbias perspective on its EU accession.

Serbias journey toward the European Union began in January 2001, when pro-European parties won parliamentary elections following the fall of Slobodan Milosevic in October 2000.

At the time, some observers even speculated that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia □ which would cease to exist in 2006 after Montenegros withdrawal — could join the EU as early as 2007.
