Iraqi National Security Adviser Qasim Al-Araji affirmed on Thursday that the Iraqi government remains committed to enhancing its relations with the international community.

According to a statement from Al-Araji's media office obtained by the Iraqi News Agency (INA), the National Security Adviser met with Josh Harris, the Chargé d'Affaires of the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad.

The discussion focused on developing bilateral relations, partnership, and cooperation between Iraq and the United States, as well as addressing issues of mutual interest, particularly the continued collaboration in counterterrorism efforts.
