Russia and Kazakhstan have agreed to gradually expand the capabilities of the Trans-Caspian International Transport Route (TITR or Middle Corridor), President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev said, Trend reports via the press service of the Kazakh president.

Tokayev made the remark in a statement to the media following the talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin in Moscow.

Tokayev also noted that the two countries have agreed to systematically enhance transport corridors such as the North-South route, as well as railway lines like Ayagoz-Bakhti, Dostyk-Moyynty, and several other projects.
