The upcoming Consultative Meeting of the Heads of State of Central Asia is expected to mark a turning point in deepening regional cooperation, the President Mirziyoyev's article Central Asia on the Threshold of a New Era says, Trend reports via the press service of the Uzbek president.

According to Mirziyoyev, consultative meetings between the leaders of Central Asian countries have, in a relatively short period of time, become an effective mechanism for regional cooperation and dialogue based on trust. He stressed that these meetings have become the key platform for developing shared approaches to strategic issues that shape both the present and future of Central Asia.

The head of state underscored that the large-scale transformation of the global order, risks of economic fragmentation, and the growing challenges of climate change, as well as food and energy security, have further reinforced the regions determination to consolidate efforts.
