Athens expects program will help 'close the gap' with Türkiye, which introduced its 1st unmanned surface vessels in 2021 and continues to expand its fleet

Greece and Ukraine will co-produce unmanned surface vessels, local media reported Tuesday, citing well-informed sources.

According to Greek daily Kathimerini, the agreement, which the parties agreed to on Sunday during Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyys visit to Athens, will supply both countries armed forces and establish a new production line at shipyards capable of building such vessels.
