Kazakhstan on Sunday issued a protest over what it described as another deliberate attack on an oil terminal in the Black Sea, saying it expects Ukraine to take effective measures to prevent similar incidents in the future.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Aibek Smadiyarov said in a statement that Astana expressed protest over the incident on Saturday, which it said targeted critical infrastructure belonging to the Caspian Pipeline Consortium (CPC) in the waters of the Port of Novorossiysk in southern Russia.

This incident marks the third act of aggression against an exclusively civilian facility whose operation is safeguarded by norms of international law, Smadiyarov said.
