Investigators in Yerevan questioned Mikael Ambartsumyan, former acting director of Armenias National Security Service (NSS) and ex-head of its Investigative Department, in connection with the so-called Nork Marash armed group case.

The interrogation took place in connection with a criminal case involving the so-called Nork Marash armed group and was conducted as a face-to-face confrontation, Caliber.Az reports per Armenian media.

The investigation claims that in 2015 [REDACTED] certain members of the group were allegedly pressured while in NSS custody, resulting in testimony that implicated the accused. As Ambartsumyan led the Investigative Department at the time, authorities deemed it necessary to question him.
