The chairmanship of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) has passed from Tajikistan to Turkmenistan as of January 1, 2026, Trend reports via the Government of Turkmenistan.

President of Turkmenistan Serdar Berdimuhamedov has previously stated that the country intends to contribute to the full realization of the organizations potential during its chairmanship.

Turkmenistan views the assumption of the CIS chairmanship as a sign of respect and trust from all member states, as well as recognition of the countrys contribution to the development of the Commonwealth, he said.
