Japan is planning to join the NATO-led initiative to provide US-made munitions, military equipment, and funding to Ukraine amid its ongoing war with Russia, Japanese public broadcaster NHK reported on Tuesday.

The Prioritized Ukraine Requirements List mechanism, launched last year by NATO and the US, also includes Germany and the Netherlands, alongside non-NATO partners such as Australia and New Zealand.

The framework has already facilitated the delivery of missiles for Ukraines Patriot air-defense systems and other critical equipment.
