Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney said Monday that Canada is renewing its relationship with China after Beijing announced visa-free travel for Canadian citizens, calling the move a key outcome of a new phase in bilateral engagement.

Were renewing Canadas relationship with China. As part of our new strategic partnership, China is granting visa-free travel for Canadians, Carney wrote on the US social media platform X, describing the policy as a tangible sign of improving ties.

Chinas Foreign Ministry said Sunday that ordinary passport holders from Canada and the UK will be allowed visa-free entry starting Feb. 17, 2026. The policy will permit stays of up to 30 days for business, tourism, family visits, exchanges and transit.
