President Zelenskyy reluctantly seems to think the only option might be for Ukraine to fix an oil pipeline to Eastern Europe.

The EU's insistence it can deliver a massive loan to Ukraine is slamming into hard reality: Hungary is showing no signs of ending its opposition and the European Commission is in a legal bind over what to do about it.

European leaders promised last December to send Ukraine    billion that it desperately needs to meet a funding shortfall in April. While Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orbán initially gave his consent, he's now changed his mind.
