Chinas foreign minister on Sunday warned against seeking regime change in Iran amid the ongoing US-Israel offensive, saying that any such move lacks public support.

"Plotting a color revolution or seeking regime change will find no popular support," Wang Yi Wang told an annual news conference on the sidelines of an important annual gathering in Beijing, state-run Xinhua News reported.

Wang also called for the sovereignty of Iran and all countries to be respected, and demanded an "immediate stop to military operations" in the Middle East to prevent an escalation and avoid a spillover of the conflict.
