A regular meeting of the Government of Armenia was held today, chaired by Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan.

During the session, Pashinyan stated that Armenia has reached a point where the established Republic must now be firmly defended.

We must protect it very strongly and very firmly in principle, because we have built a country that has a future. That does not mean that there are no unresolved issues in Armenia. There is no country in the world without unresolved problems—it simply does not exist.
