Belarusian President Alexander Lukashenko has called on the Collective Security Treaty Organization to be very careful and tactful in its engagement with Armenia.

Speaking on Monday during a meeting with CSTO Secretary General Taalatbek Masadykov, Lukashenko acknowledged that while the organization has achieved certain results, it continues to face a number of unresolved issues. Among them, he singled were relations with Armenia as requiring particular attention, the Belta news agency reported.

According to the Belarus leader, Armenias position within the CSTO remains complicated. He noted that Yerevan appears reluctant to fully support the organizations activities, yet continues to remain a member. In this context, Lukashenko stressed the importance of maintaining a careful and balanced approach.
