Taiwan's main opposition party Kuomintang's chairwoman Cheng Li-wun arrived in China on Tuesday, marking the first visit by a KMT leader in a decade, for an expected meeting with Chinese President Xi Jinping.

Cheng's delegation is scheduled to visit Jiangsu province, Shanghai, and finally Beijing during the visit, which will continue through Sunday, state-run news agency Xinhua reported.

The visit is seen as an important step in dialogue and exchanges between the KMT and China's Communist Party under the current circumstances.
