Greece and Israel signed a major deal for the purchase of the PULS rocket launchers for the Hellenic Armed Forces.

The million agreement ($757 million) with Elbit Systems Ltd. announced on Monday includes a comprehensive munitions package, including training rockets, precision-guided missiles for various ranges, and loitering munitions. The contract will be executed over four years and includes an additional ten-year logistics support package.

Elbit Systems will collaborate with the local Greek defense industry to facilitate the production of the system, ensuring technology transfer and the exchange of technical expertise. The Greek Parliament approved the deal to purchase 36 launchers in December 2025.
