EU Observer (16 April 2026)

Andreas RASPOTNIK and Mads Qvist FREDERIKSEN

The gap between what this region contributes and what it receives in political attention is not a detail. It is a strategic failure.

There is phrase in diplomatic circles: What happens in the Arctic does not stay in the Arctic.

Those who live and work in the High North have heard it several hundred times, usually from people who have never set foot above the Arctic Circle.
