How revolutionary can it be? one EU official asked, as PM Keir Starmer insists he wont support economic integration.

British Prime Minister Keir Starmer's plans for a major reset with the EU risk falling flat if he doesn't relax his negotiating red lines.

The embattled U.K. Labour leader vowed to put his country at the heart of Europe, as part of efforts to shore up support and shrug off calls for his resignation, following dismal local election results.
