Georgian Prime Minister Irakli Kobakhidze has accused what he called local agents and their foreign patrons of attempting to sow discord between Tbilisi and Yerevan amid growing European Union engagement with Armenia.

In an interview with the Imedi television channel, Kobakhidze said comparisons between Georgia and Armenia were an uncomfortable topic, stressing that the two countries are linked by very friendly relations and a strategic partnership, News.Az reports, citing News Georgia.

There is an attempt by local agents and their foreign patrons to somehow pit us against Armenia, including through comparisons. This will not be successful, the prime minister said.
