Pashinyan says Armenia will not respond to Israel's decision, arguing that avoiding the politicization of the issue is in the country's interest.

Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan on Monday said Armenia sees no need to respond to Israel's recognition of the 1915 events as genocide, arguing that avoiding the "weaponization" of the issue is in the interest of Yerevan.

Speaking at a briefing, Pashinyan underlined that it is in the interest of Armenia to not enter into misuse of the issue, according to state news agency Armenpress. We see no need to respond because, he added.
